Survey on Teaching among PhD students

Developed by PhD Students for PhD students at the Institute of Physics

The survey is intended to give the Graduate Research Training Group of the Institute an overview of how the PhD students at our institute cope with their teaching obligations. We'd like to get an overview how teaching obligations are distributed and to what extent the doctoral candidates have an influence on it. Furthermore, the satisfaction of the doctoral students with their teaching activities will be surveyed.

The goal is to gather knowledge and experience and to pass it on to new doctoral students, to recognize the current normal state and deviations from it, to identify problems and, if necessary, to formulate suggestions to the Institute's University Teaching Conference. This survey should be conducted annually at the beginning of the summer semester, if possible, to provide a regular feedback on the teaching situation at our institute.

We invite all PhD students to participate: You will need approximately 10-15 minutes to complete the questionnaire. Participation is possible within two weeks until 30th of September 2021.

Language: English

Location: Online via EvaSys; PhD students receive an email with a link which leads to the survey.
